PREPARING FOR LEADING CHANGE IN MEDICAL EDUCATION (PLCME)

INTRODUCTORY INFORMATION

Many medical educators have already implemented creative initiatives in their role and now want to tackle larger educational projects and engage more colleagues from diverse backgrounds in bringing about change. This participatory one day course explores the challenges and barriers to leading change in medical education and introduces some underpinning strategies and criteria for success.

Who should participate in the course?

Experienced medical or clinical educators seeking a supportive forum to explore the principles and practice of leadership in medical education.

What will participants gain from participating in the course?

By the end of the day participants will

- have increased their knowledge and skills on educational leadership
- have an increased understanding of the challenges and benefits of multi-professional collaboration in medical education
- be aware of key models of change appropriate to an educational context
- have begun to develop their own strategy for change.

Each participant is encouraged to identify an issue or topic with an educational element which they wish to lead on in their professional context. These examples will be used to apply the leadership and change models which in turn will support participants in beginning to develop their own strategies for change.

Participants will receive a certificate of attendance at the end of day. Some participants may choose to submit, within six months, a short report or a publication draft (up to 3000 words) including their educational initiative on which they wish to lead, their plan of action and a reflection on how effective its evaluation strategy, tools and the outcomes of carrying out their evaluation. Mentoring is available to support this additional activity and completion will lead to award of the certificate of completion of PLCME.
